

Tribal Memory: Responsibilities to the Circle

Contributed by Jay Schuster
Tuesday, 16 August 2005

From rite at More-than-Annual Meeting, 11/11/2000

- To hold sacred the whole of one's spiritual journey.
- To keep sanctuary, a place free of danger and a place of safety.
- My responsibility is to be myself and trust that my part is part of the whole.
- My responsibility is to transform obligation into gift.
- My responsibility is to speak in honesty and authenticity, in nourishing myself and others.
- To maintain the awareness that the Circle includes all of us.
- My responsibility to the Circle is to recognize and value the Yin and the Yang.
- I pledge to hold the space in turn, and to know that, when you are holding the space, I can experiment. I cannot help you, if I am not healed.
- My responsibility is to offer my gifts; I am healed and so will you be.
- My responsibility is to listen attentively with an open heart.
- To the Circle, my responsibility is to bring my true self, not the thing you want me to be.
- My responsibility is not to judge, but to express my love to all of you.
- As a circle of feys, we proceed out of love and joy, not out of a work ethic.
- My responsibility to that I choose to be here and I honor that choice.
- In the Circle, I am responsible for being part of the solution, not part of the problem.
- I am responsible to the Circle and the spirits to perform clarity and vision and community and communication and, most of all, myself.
- My responsibility to the Circle is to feel for me, from me.
- My responsibility is that what I put into the Circle should be out of love and not from ego.
- My responsibility to the Circle is to process and to transform emotion and energies that are difficult into beauty.
- To play well with others.
- To love unconditionally so that our wings will spread wide, so that we can fly.
- To be in love.
- My responsibility is to honor those who came before and to follow.
- My responsibility is to be as wise with patience and silence as I am with fierceness and drive.

- My responsibility is to relax and enjoy myself.
- To hear your truth.
- It is my intention to support the establishment and evolution of providing a conduit of information between the collective whole and individuals, by honoring our process while staying invested as an individual within the collective whole.